West Trial, Set For Yesterday, to be Held Today

The trial of Mrs. Frank West of this city, charged with grand larceny, came up this afternoon in the Indianapolis police court. The case was set down for hearing yesterday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock, but word from Indianapolis today is to the effect that it was continued until this afternoon. This is the second continuance that has been granted, and it is likely that not many more will be granted and the trial will be held

TODAY IS CLOSE OF ASSESSING PERIOD

One Assessor Makes Report According to Law and Others Are Expected in Soon.

BOARD OF REVIEW IN JUNE

Today was the day, according to the law, that the township assessors should make their reports with County Auditor Allen R. Holden. This morning, A. S. Marshall, assessor in Rushville township and city, was the only one who had filed his report, and it was not expected they would all be in before the last of this week or the first of next.

People who were not seen by the assessors may as well call at the auditor's office and give in their assessment as the tax will have to be paid and the officials will attempt to list every taxpayer in the county.
When an assessor fails to see a taxpayer, and he feels reasonably certain that the taxpayer has not increased his property holdings, he gets the amount from the last year's tax duplicate.

Beginning with the first Monday in June the county board of review will meet daily to take up the question of who has been assessed too large an amount. At that time any person who thinks he has been assessed unjustly can make his complaint and it will be adjusted if their arguments are strong enough and their reasons plausible.

WILL REPRESENT SCHOOL

Earl Roam and James Shannahan go to Richmond Friday.

Earl Roam and James Shannahan
will leave tomorrow night for Richmond to represent the Rushville high school in the state interscholastic track and field meet which will be conducted under the auspices of Earlham college. Neither of the boys has had much training, but they made a good showing in the meet at Lebanon last Saturday and they have hopes of placing in the meet next Saturday. They will be accompanied to Richmond by Prof. O. D. Tyner, principal of the high school.

C. M. YOCUM A DIRECTOR.

The Rev. C. M. Yocum, pastor of the Main Street Christian church, was elected a member of the board of directors of the Christian Missionary association at the business session of the Central Christian church in Indianapolis, where the state convention of the church is being held. The election took place at the close of yesterday afternoon's meeting.

Philadelphia is soon to abolish all railway grade crossings.

TOWN AGOG OVER ANNOUNCEMENT

"The Three Female Hypocrites of Blue Ridge" is Topic For Sermon Next Sunday.

THE GOSSIPS ARE QUAVING

Arrangements Are Being Made to Accommodate a Large Audience—
Worst is Expected.

Excitement is running high in Blue Ridge at the present time over the text chosen by the Rev. E. T. Lewis for his sermon on Sunday, May 25, at the M. E. church, says the Shelby-ville Republican. The Rev. Lewis has chosen "The Three Female Hypocrites of Blue Ridge" as his text and every one is anxiously awaiting for the sensation which will result from the disclosure of the hypocrisy on the part of three Blue Ridge ladies.

Never before in the history of the town has excitement ran so high over any social scandal as at the present time. It is the sole topic of conversation over all the side or back fences and at all the uptown loafing places, and at all the missionary societies and other places where the women meet and gossip.

Nevertheless the fact remains that some three of these women are going to be charged with and publicly denounced as being hypocrites of the blackest type before the entire church congregation, and all the multitude of visitors drawn there on that day to witness the sensational developments in the case.

Just who these women are no one knows, and no one dares try to guess, for fear that the terrible accusation of the minister will strike them or some of their nearest and dearest friends. Accommodations are being prepared for one of the largest crowds ever assembled in the church, as a full attendance of the members is expected as well as all "excitement loving" persons in the vicinity.

The Rev. E. T. Lewis, whose home is at St. Paul, has held the pastor-ship of the Blue Ridge church since September, 1912, and has been a very popular minister with his congregation. Services are held in the Blue Ridge church only every other Sunday, and Sunday the text was announced for the next service which is May 25. No doubt every one will be very much scared by the appointed time.

NEXT MONDAY IS LAST DAY

Seniors Will Then be Out of School
For Good.

Next Monday will be the last day
in school for the high school Seniors.
The examinations for the members of the graduating class will be held Friday and Monday. Since two-hour examinations are held now, two days are required to give the tests. After that the Seniors will not be compelled to attend school, but will be at liberty to prepare for the commencement week exercises. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached at the Main Street Christian church by the Rev. C. M. Yocum and the commencement exercises will be held Friday evening, May 30.

CUT HER HAND.

While chopping wood this morning,
Mrs. Ed Rainey made a miscue and chopped her hand. The sharp instrument penetrated to the bone, but the wound did not bleed very freely.

SMALL CROWD HEARS CONCERT

All That Audience at the Christian Church Lacked in Size is Made up in Appreciation.

SOLOISTS AND QUARTET HEARD

Harold Jaffe, Youthful Violinist, Wins Merited Applause For His Performance.

All that the audience at the Main Street Christian church last night to hear the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music artists lacked in size was made up in appreciation. No more enjoyable musical program was ever given at the chautauqua than the one last night, yet the crowd numbered less than a hundred.

Carl Beutel displayed his wonderful ability as a pianist with the opening number on the program, and the male quartet won instant favor.
"Whispering Roses," by Biebel, was especially appreciated.

Doubtless the audience was more pleased with the appearance of Harold Jaffe, the fifteen-year-old violinist of Indianapolis, than with any other one of the galaxy of artists.
He played with a precision that revealed talent. The vigorous and insistent applause after his only appearance in a group of solos caused him to play "Humoresque," from the Tales of Hoffman. Jaffe recently made his debut to an Indianapolis audience at a vaudeville theater and won instant attention and merited
praise from the critics.

Wesley W. Howard, tenor soloist, sang "The Fairy Glen," by Marshall and Mr. Beutel followed with a group of three. Garland Yost, violin soloist and teacher of Jaffe stepped into the graces of the audience with the manner he rendered the first group of three solos, and at the close of the group, the crowd would have nothing except that he play again.
Since it was his only appearance on the program, he kindly consented to play a short encore number.

The second appearance of the male quartet was even better than the first. "Mamma's Lullaby" and
"The Jolly Blacksmith's Lay" were in the strain that appealed to the audience, and the quartet had to respond to an encore. The program was closed with a series of three short songs by the tenor soloist and the same number by the pianist, all of which were generously applauded.

NOT MUCH DOING IN COURT

Newcastle People Disappointed Because Case Was Not Tried.

It was again quiet in court today and very little was done. A number of people from Newcastle were disappointed this morning when they came here for the trial of Mary Knox against Charles Smith for damages demanding $5,000 and found that it was not set for trial. The case was to have been tried today, but Judge Megee postponed it over a week ago
and notified the attorneys in the case.
For some reason the Newcastle parties failed to get the word and all the witnesses and attorneys in the case came here this morning ready for the trial.

MISSIONARY FROM CONGO.

The Rev. Herbert Smith, a missionary from Congo, Africa, will speak at the Little Flatrock church
next Sunday morning and evening.
His talks will be illustrated with maps. The Rev. Mr. Smith has a fine story of great interest to tell.

NEW PRINCIPAL IS NAMED

Charles Sterling of Morristown to Succeed J. L. Shauck.

Charles Sterling of Morristown has been elected principal of the Arlington school. He has been principal of the Morristown school for a number of years and made an enviable reputation there. Mr. Sterling succeeds Prof. J. L. Shauck, who has resigned after devoting the best of his life to the teaching profession in the schools of Rush county. Prof. Shauck will leave for Spokane, Wash., the first of June for an indefinite stay with his daughter.

PHYSICIANS MET IN LIBERTY TODAY

Semi-Annual Session of Union District Medical Association Held There.

DR. HOUGHLAND ON PROGRAM

The eighty-ninth semi-annual meeting of the Union District Medical Association was held today in Liberty. The last meeting of the society was held in this city. Several physicians from here attended the meeting, including Drs. W. C. Smith,
J. C. Sexton, Lowell Green, F. G.
Hackleman, R. T. Blount and E. I.
Wooden. The only physician from this county on the program was Dr.
C. S. Houghland of Milroy. Dr.
Houghland gave a talk on "The Auxiliary Treatment of Pneumonia."

The program was as follows:
"Ether Anesthesia," Dr. George B.
Hunt of Richmond; "Systematic and Local Disturbances Due to Seminal," Dr. E. O. Smith of Cincinnati,
"Wait Yet a Little While," Dr. Mark Millikin of Hamilton; "Changes that Take Place in the Heart and Blood Vessels From Inflammatory Causes,"
Dr. Charles Bond of Richmond;
"Post-operative Thrombo-Phlebitis," Dr. W. D. Haines of Cincinnati; "The Auxiliary Treatment of Pneumonia," Dr. C. S. Houghland of Milroy.

MAY BE BACK BY SATURDAY

Miss Nelle Baldwin Still Compelled to Stay in Bed.

Word has been received here that Miss Nelle Baldwin, Latin instructor in the high school, who was injured in a runaway at North Vernon last Sunday afternoon, may be able to return here Saturday. Even though she is still compelled to remain in bed, her recovery will be rapid from now on, it is thought, and she can resume her duties next week. According to a letter she wrote friends here,
Miss Baldwin was driving the team of horses. They frightened as they were driven under a railroad bridge.
A train passed overhead and an automobile whizzed past. Miss Baldwin and the other girl in the front seat were thrown out first.

FORESTRY CLUBS MAY BE FORMED

Act of Last Legislature Makes Possible For Local Organizations. to Benefit Public.

HOLDINGS ARE NOT TAXABLE

Grounds May Be Used for Picnicing and Pleasure Grounds Under Certain Conditions.

An act of the last legislature, approved February 12, allows the organization of local forestry associations, to acquire and control lands which "shall not be sold or incumbered, but shall be held in perpetuity
for forestry purposes for the benefit of the public; which shall not be taxable for state, county, township,
town, or any other purposes."

The lands acquired are to be planted and cultivated as forests, and the money from the sale of the product, with other moneys from the lands, shall be used in acquiring other lands and reforesting and maintaining the forest in perpetuity,
any surplus to go to the school fund.

The forest may be used for picnics and pleasure grounds under rules to be adopted by the forestry board.
The injury or destruction of any tree in such forest is to be punished by fines of five times the value of such tree. The funds of any such association are to be derived from voluntary contributions and self imposed fees and dues; but, having once become part of the funds of an association they are inalienable. If an association ceases to exist the title to its property shall vest in the state.

Any number of persons not less than five may organize by filing one copy of their articles of association with the county recorder, and another copy with the secretary of the Indiana Forestry Association. These articles are only required to specify
"the name of such association as the forestry association of the county,
city, town or township, as the case may be, where it is contemplated to establish and maintain a public forest." Continued on Page 5

From a Man's Point of View

It used to be said that newspaper advertising held very little interest for men. They were too busy, and were quite willing that their wives and mothers and sisters should read advertisements and attend to the household shopping.

That is all different now.
At the clubs, in the hotels—wherever men meet—you hear them chatting about the new hats at So-and-So's or the smart boots at a popular shop
or the splendid and satisfactory service received at a well-known haberdashery.

Many stores make a special effort to plan their merchandising so that men, busy, particular men, may shop conveniently, quickly, and be sure not only of correct and individual apparel, but of painstaking, intelligent and efficient store service. That is what appeals to a man.

Up-and-doing men find just as much of valuable information in the advertising pages
of THE DAILY REPUBLICAN
as women do.

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

(Ball Bearing—Long Wearing)

In buying a typewriter you want a satisfactory answer to three questions:

What will it do for me?
How well will it do it?
How long will it do it?

By answering these queries with the needs of the typewriter owner and user in mind, the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Company has attained the front rank in the typewriter field.

Some people think that a typewriter is a typewriter and that is all there is to it. Machines may look alike but there is a lot of difference in efficiency.

The new Model Five is built not only for straight correspondence but for tabulating, billing and in fact for every service needed in the average business.

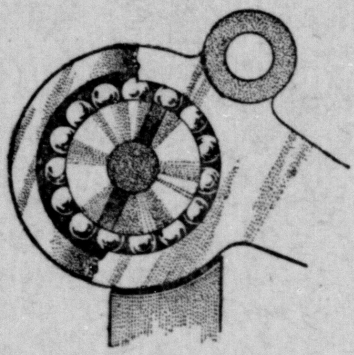

Its ball bearings at all points where friction develops through action, permit close adjustment and insure correct and accurate typewriting.

Cheating at Cards.
Why is cheating at cards the quickest way out of society? The answer is not so much that murder and burglary are so infrequent as to offer no data for generalization as that with cheating at cards, for which there is no legal penalty, society has to protect itself and does so with characteristic cruelty. One of the men accused of the offense lived abroad for the rest of his life, and the ban was never removed. He died a couple of years ago. Another with very high connections made a sort of fight against the taboo and lived on in England until the end, but he, too, was never forgiven. The third man, who was concerned in a world famous case, is thought by many to have been wrongfully accused. He was one of the most popular and brilliant men of his time, but he has since lived quietly on his estate and never comes to London.

SEVERELY CRITICISED HIGH COURT DECISION

Senator Kern Dencuncas West Virginia Ruling.

Washington, May 15.—Protracted debate occurred in the senate on the resolution of Senator Kern of Indiana providing for an investigation under the auspices of the senate committee on education and labor, of the general situation in the coal regions of West Virginia. For more than two hours Senator Kern addressed the senate upon the necessity for a determination whether the constitutional rights of the miners had been invaded by the military tribunals organized under and by virtue of the orders of Governor Hatfield within the zones of Kanawha county in which martial law had been declared. In the course of his speech Senator Kern criticised severely the decision of the supreme court of West Virginia, which had rendered the opinion that the military court within the zones of trouble had the right not only to arrest and detain, but to try and to convict and punish offenders against the peace and dignity of the state.

More Fresh Air For Thaw.

Newburgh, N. Y., May 15.—In response to a writ of habeas corpus the acting superintendent of the Matteawan hospital took Harry K. Thaw to New York today to give testimony in the charges brought against John N. Anhalt, a lawyer, in the matter of the $20,000 bribe alleged to have been offered to secure Thaw's release from Matteawan.

Of Interest to the Blind.

London, May 15.—The British Blind society is preparing a complete Braille of Shakespeare, which the society will supply at cost, according to the length of the play. For instance, the Merry Wives of Windsor will cost 30 pence.

It is said that a poll of congressmen just taken shows the majority in the house against "votes for women" to be five to one. It also is said that the sentiment in the senate is almost as overwhelmingly opposed to woman suffrage.

ALIEN LAND BILL WILL BE SIGNED

Precipitates Issue Between America and Japan.

CHINDA AWAITS HIS ANSWER

Governor Johnson's Announcement That He Will Give the Executive Approval to California's Anti-Jap Legislation, Makes It Necessary For the Government to Answer the Protest Lodged by Japanese Ambassador.

Washington, May 15.—Announcing his determination to sign the California alien land bill, Governor Johnson's message has been received at the state department. This final action by Governor Johnson puts the federal government in a position where it will be obliged to take up the cudgels for California in fighting Japan's protest. The next move will be for the United States government to make. Secretary Bryan will be obliged to answer the protest which Ambassador Chinda has lodged with him. The United States certainly will go to the extent of maintaining that there has been no violation of the nation's treaty obligations, and Governor Johnson, through his message, seems to make it necessary also for the state department to oppose Japan's complaint of offensive discrimination.

Apparently, however, Governor Johnson leaves one little loophole through which he may yet reverse himself if on extreme emergency should develop. He informs Secretary Bryan that he considers it his duty to sign the bill unless some "absolutely controlling necessity demands contrary action."

Governor Johnson acknowledges that he can see no such necessity, and apparently he puts it up to Mr. Bryan to disclose that danger if it exists.

Governor Johnson, in his reply to Mr. Bryan, contends that the California bill is fully within the treaty obligations of the United States. He denies flatly also that it carries any intended offense to Japan or any other nation, or that it is discriminatory. He adds that California has been forced to pass this bill for the protection and preservation of the state. "We must see it or be blind," says he. "We insist," says the Johnson message, "that justly no offense can be taken by any nation to this law, and more particularly does this seem to be clear in the instance of a nation like Japan that by its own laws prevents acquisition of land by aliens."

"It is most respectfully submitted that, after all, the question is not whether any offense has been taken, but whether justly it should be taken. I voice, I think, the sentiment of the majority of the legislature of this state when I say that if it had been believed that offense could justly be taken by any nation to the proposed law, that law would not have been enacted."

"We of California believe firmly that in our legislative dealings with this alien land question, we have violated absolutely no treaty rights; we have shown no shadow of discrimination; we have given to no nation the right to be justified in taking offense. So believing—with a strong reliance on the justice and the righteousness of our cause, and with due deference and courtesy and with proper consideration for the feelings and the views of others—we had hoped the authorities at Washington would have seen the question as we in this state have been forced to see it—as we must see it or be blind."

"And so, with all respect and courtesy, the state of California feels its bounden duty to its citizens to do that which the interests of its people demand; that which the conscience of its people approve; that which violates no treaty rights; that which presents no discrimination; and that which can give no just cause for offense. Our people, as represented in the legislature, have overwhelmingly expressed their desire for the present alien land bill. The vote in the senate was 35 to 2 and in the assembly 72 to 3. With such unanimity of opinion, even did I hold other views, I would feel it my plain duty to sign the bill, unless some absolutely controlling necessity demanded contrary action. Apparently no such controlling necessity exists."

WOULD DIE LIKE A SOLDIER

Nevada Murderer Chose Bullets in Preference to Gallows.

Reno, Nev., May 15.—The first legal execution in this state by shooting rather than by the old method of hanging murderers took place at the Carson City jail when Ambrija Mircovich, who not only asked that he be shot rather than hanged, but also refused to be blindfolded when facing the rifle muzzles, was executed for the murder of a prominent merchant and former legislator, Anton Gregovich, at Tonopah last year.

When guards offered him support during the walk to the execution chair Mircovich waved them aside, saying proudly that he preferred to "die like a soldier" and would walk unassisted.

Mr. Bryan says that party national conventions are a thing of the past and that presidential candidates in the future will be nominated at primaries.

BLOODSHED MARKED RIOTING AT YONKERS

Sugar Refinery Strike Becomes Serious.

Yonkers, N. Y., May 15.—Last night rioting marked by bloodshed and resulting in nineteen arrests ensued when 400 strikers at the plant of the Federal Sugar refinery attacked 300 non-union employees as they emerged from the factory.

Twenty-five policemen took three patrol wagon loads of prisoners. Many had broken heads from the policemen's clubs and were taken to the hospital for treatment.

The strike is now a month old. The refinery was closed down entirely for two weeks after the 800 laborers quit, but the backbone of the strike was broken last Saturday when 300 employees went back to work as non-union men. Fights have been an every-day occurrence since then.

Last night the disorder assumed serious proportions. Angered by the fact that four of their number were held for the grand jury yesterday as a result of previous fights, the strikers were bent on trouble. When the workers filed out they formed in a long line, and as the workers filed past they bombarded them with stones.

"KEEPING HIM IN LINE"

Convicted Inspector Said to Have Been Paid to "Take His Medicine."

New York, May 15.—Information has been brought to the district attorney's office to the effect that Inspector Murtha, one of the four inspectors who are now serving a term in the penitentiary on conviction for conspiracy, had received substantial financial assistance with a view to "keeping him in line" and convincing him that his duty to the department lay in taking his medicine. One version of the report which reached the district attorney had it that the amount was $10,000. It had been intimated that Murtha was contemplating a general confession which would involve a number of "higher ups."

TOLD JUST WHAT THEY MAY EXPECT

Manufacturers Receive Straight Tip From Government.

THE REDUCTION OF WAGES

As a Protest Against Certain Sections of the Underwood Tariff Bill Will Not Be Countenanced by Administration, Secretary Redfield Pointing Out the Means the Government Has of Circumventing Such a Plan.

Washington, May 15.—Secretary of Commerce Redfield last night painted for the manufacturers of the United States a word picture of what they might expect in cases where the federal government felt obliged to "walk into their offices" to inquire into wage cuts under the new tariff bill. This was disclosed in an address by Secretary Redfield before the National Association of Employing Lithographers in session here. This association had warned congress that the lithographers would have to reduce wages if the Underwood bill became a law.

"If I grasp the public mind at all clearly," said Secretary Redfield, "it holds unfavorable views toward reduction of wages except under direct necessity. It would not, for example, approve them for the sake of maintaining profits, least of all as a means of political menace. Furthermore, there is in existence a belief that the reduction of wages is the easy resort of the inefficient and that it is the hall mark of poor management."

"I believe this to be so. As, therefore, the reduction of wages has direct social effects and as the public has the right to efficiency in their factories' servants, the department has undertaken to find out whether the facts do or do not justify the threatened reductions. Observe that in saying the facts one does not mean merely the facts as they are, but also the facts as they ought to be. Operating with bad equipment, with unscientific treatment of material, with antiquated methods, in poor locations, with insufficient capital and generally ineffective management, will not be esteemed satisfactory reason for reducing wages. The investigation will not be carried on in a 'trust-busting' spirit, but will be carried out in a spirit of helpfulness."

"Possibly few people realize how efficient machinery the department of commerce has for making such an investigation. For example, on the scientific side of such an inquiry, the great bureau of standards is of prime use. In the present inquiry (that of the pottery industry) the clay products section of this bureau, located at Pittsburgh, will take an active part, and it other industries come under investigation well trained scientific men and good equipment are ready in chemistry and mechanics and many other lines to do similar work."

"The bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, under whose direct auspices the present inquiry proceeds, has brought powers of inquiry into the cost of production, wages, general factory conditions and the like."

"The bureau of corporations also has broad scope in studying accounting and cost-keeping methods, with the right of subpoena which it has in times past found some need to exercise. If these three are not enough, the bureau of labor statistics in our sister department of labor has powers of inquiry on the labor side which can be made effective."

Secretary Redfield told the lithographers that he had spoken thus frankly because he had received from their association a circular referring to the reduction of duty on goods in which they were interested producers. He warned them that statements based on averages would not be accepted as final. "We should want to know," he continued, "the best and the worst, for averages may be misleading."

So that the lithographers might not harbor the delusion that his remarks about inefficiency did not apply to their industry, Secretary Redfield took up the complaints that have appeared in articles in their trade journals. After reading these statements Secretary Redfield threw this into the meeting:

"The community may think these statements a strange offset against the other statement that 'wages must go down in order to compete' for these also are your own words."

Here is one sentence that he dropped in the course of his speech: "The gospel of self-respect and American manhood is making its way and the day of industrial fear is passing."

Difference of Temperament.

The reports of the postal savings banks will add to the old delusion that the East is much more thrifty than the West. It has long been the habit of some economists, and more demagogues, to point to the difference in what is called "the favor" of the East, in bank deposits. Before the coming of the postal savings banks, we were periodically reminded in official reports of bank deposits, sometimes of all bank deposits and sometimes only of savings bank deposits, either that the East was much more economical, and therefore more wealthy, than the West, or that, under tariff legislation, and other forms of fiscal and financial legislation, the people of the East were growing rich at a much more rapid rate than those of any other section.

Reports of postal savings bank deposits continue to show that the East puts away more money than the West, per capita. The saving habit is accordingly, and for the thousandth time, said to be more strongly developed there than here. And it is being said again, also for the thousandth time, that federal legislation is responsible for the disproportion. The fact is that nobody is responsible for it outside of the people themselves. There is a large element in the Eastern population which must put its money out at low interest for the reason that it fears to take risks. The postal savings banks, with the government guarantee of interest and liquidation of their deposits, has brought out millions of dollars which have long been in hiding under hearthstones and in chimneys, cellars and holes in the ground, because their owners were afraid even to trust banks of the highest credit and solvency. These are added to the other millions deposited by Easterners who have always left their savings in banks paying but small interest instead of venturing them in business lines.

The temperament of the West, and also of the South is altogether different. It takes chances, and often desperate chances. The savings of the people go into lands, into the planting and sowing of larger crops, into the buying of real estate either for investment or speculation, into saw mills, flour mills, commercial enterprises of all kinds, and too often, it must be said, into stocks which prove worthless. The type of the Westerner may not be as saving as the type of the Easterner, but instead of making less he makes more money, and such part of this as he saves he does not want to invest at a merely nominal rate of interest. He would rather take the chance of large loss along with the chance of large gain, and lie awake nights thinking about it than to place it where the custodians can make more out of his money than he is making himself and sleep soundly as a result of his sacrifice.

The miserable bosses or some such thing in New Jersey slipped one over on the President when the New Jersey senate turned down the jury reform bill backed by Wilson. It passed the lower house and the Wilson newspapers shouted for joy and commented on how the President had ousted the bosses at home. Now comment is lacking. It seems that the bill provides for just such a system of drawing jurors as is used in Indiana now.

Lyman Abbott has lost his job as vice-president of the Peace Society, but perhaps if he would take lessons in the manly art of self defense, he would be considered competent for it again.

Grave alarm was expressed lest the Senate might do something while the House was discussing the tariff, but that is not one of the ways the Senate has had, in past years, anyway.

The fifth annual banquet of the Alumni of the Milroy high school was held last night in the basement of the new Presbyterian church at Milroy. The gathering was a repetition of former ones and a success in every way. Over one hundred members attended and the eats showed what can be done in old Milroy.

The music for the evening was furnished by the Innis orchestra and it kept up the standard of excellence.

The march from the reception rooms to the banquet hall began promptly at eight o'clock and after the members were seated, the invocation was given by the Rev. Paul Stewart. And from that time until one o'clock a. m. mirth and seriousness intermingled.

Miss Lou Tompkins was toast-mistress and she performed her duties as Lou always does, the best ever. Toasts by Mrs. Erma Richey, Carlos McKee, Miss Sybil Bogart, Mrs. Edna Shelhorn and A. M. Taylor were enjoyed by all. J. L. Shauck, our grandest old man, was in a happy reminiscent mood and brought us all back with him to the days gone by. We love all our teachers, but there can never be another J. L. Shauck and we keep a sacred spot in our hearts for him.

Welcomes were sung to each member in verse coined for the occasion, to the tunes of Old Black Joe, Little Brown Jug, The Campbells Are Coming and Good Night Ladies.

We can not tell you how good every bit of it was. But to see, is to believe. At the close Auld Lang Syne was sung, after which the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Oldham, and we all departed with the feeling that the alumni banquet must go on and on forever.

CONSUL WAS BORN IN A LOG CABIN

Joe Hill, Shelbyville's Colored Statesman Who Goes to Haiti, a St. Paul Product.

WILL LEAVE IN THREE MONTHS

Joe Hill, the colored statesman of Shelbyville who has been appointed United States consul to Port Au Prince Hayti, was born in a log house which stood on the county line near St. Paul. His birth took place in a room that projected into Shelby county. Hill will leave for Haiti in about three months, but will not take up his duties for six months.

"Lawyers at Indianapolis tell me that if they had to pass the examination for places in the diplomatic service, they would fall down on international law," said Hill, who believes that the examination is too severe. "The average lawyer does not know much about international law. When he wants to know anything, he goes to his books."

Hill said he probably would fall short on admiralty law and the languages. He expects to pick up the language after he gets there.

The president of Haiti recently died and native politics is in a flux as a consequence.

The robbery was committed while Franks lay asleep in his boarding house in Indianapolis early yesterday morning. Franks had hung his trousers on the bedpost and went to bed and when he awoke his money was gone. Suspicion was placed upon two other railroad men and they were arrested. One of the men gave Franks back $4.50, saying that was all he had taken. He gave bond for his appearance, while the other man was remanded to jail to await trial.

UNITE TO RECOVER CHILD'S CUSTODY

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baker of Knightstown, Although Divorced, Want Their Daughter Back.

UNUSUAL CASE UP IN COURT

Fred F. Baker, employed at Knightstown, Ind., and his divorced wife stood united yesterday in Superior Court, Room 2, to get their 6-year-old daughter, Florence, from Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hargrove, says the Indianapolis Star. Baker prayed the court to change the order made at the time of the divorce, when the custody of the child was given to the mother. The mother turned the child over to her sister, Mrs. Hargrove. For five years the child has been a member of that family. The Hargroves do not desire to give up the girl, but Mr. Hargrove said he was not willing to adopt her. A year ago the mother filed a habeas corpus suit in Superior Court, Room 3, asking for her child. Judge Carter denied the writ. Baker since then asked for his daughter and when the Hargroves refused to give her up he petitioned Judge Collier to change the original decree. He said he wished to place the girl with his sister, who is caring for the girl's older brother. His divorced wife testified for him. Judge Collier took the case under advisement.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

LET US HAVE THE REAL THING.

(Huntington Herald.)
"If we are to have free trade, let's have it. Let the party that favors it vote for it. Let's try it."

This from former President Taft in a Yale lecture Monday exactly expresses the sentiment of the country. The Democratic party has been proclaiming the iniquities of protection for sixteen years and this outcry against the present tariff system has been the chief stock in trade during campaign activities. If we do not need it to maintain our industrial supremacy and our standard of wage and living, let's get rid of it at once and for all time. Let's have an honest experiment. Let's not have hammers out for the protected industry during campaign time, and soft words and considerate figuring when it comes to congressional action. We are glad to see wool made free. Our farmers were envious in their prosperity, and the wage earner wants cheaper clothes. Let's see if the free wool plan will bring the desired results to both. We should prefer free sugar to delayed destruction of the sugar tariffs. If the American sugar industry can compete with the world in three years, it will more speedily adjust itself if the sugar tariff is immediately abolished.

The clamor for tariff reduction, or tariff destruction has been insistent, persistent and wearying. Let's have the experiment. But let's have it consistent. If we are to have free flour, let's have free wheat. If we are to have free meats, let's have free hogs and cattle. There is no consistency in the plan of abandoning the tariff on the carcass and maintaining protection on the live animal.

We want to see the democratic party make good its free trade proposals. We are opposed to sops for political effect. Let's learn our tariff lesson from actual experience. Let's abolish all doubt, and leave no room for argument, if essential free trade is good for the American people, let's make it a permanent policy. If it proves destructive, we shall have learned our lesson so impressively that the tariff question will be made a business problem, and we shall solve it in a business way, free from the faking of the politicians who shout one thing on the stump, and vote in contradiction in the halls of congress.

The Argyle Case

A Novelization by J. W. McConaughy of the Successful New Play by Harriet Ford, Harvey J. O'Higgins and Detective William J. Burns, in Which Robert Hilliard Is Appearing.

PROLOGUE.

When a murder is committed there is invariably a motive. Sometimes it is obvious; sometimes its presence is masked behind a complexity of possibilities until it is well nigh impossible to disentangle the slender skein of fact from the warp and woof of probability. But always the motive is there. "Look for the woman," said Pere Tabaret, the French detective, "and in her you will find the solution of your mystery—if you find her." And in the main he was right. Yet it is not always the obvious woman nor the obvious motive that is responsible for a crime. Sometimes the underlying cause rests on deeper reasons than are apparent even to the closest observer. Then only an accident can give a clew to the real criminal. And so it is with "The Argyle Case."

CHAPTER I. The Murder.

UPON a day James Argyle was about his usual haunts. Upon an evening he was at his home, seemingly hale and happy. Upon a morning he was found on a Persian rug by the inlaid table of his rich library lying on his side with one hand gripping the table cover, the bosom of his evening shirt a deep brick red, a small hole one inch to the left of the second stud, his glazed eyes staring at the ceiling. A chair near by was overturned, and some distance away lay a revolver. It was a plain murder.

The crime was discovered shortly after 7 o'clock in the morning, and by 9 the evening papers were on the street with columns of picturesque detail and theory, for James Argyle was known from one end of Manhattan to the other. He was also known in San Francisco and other places.

In the first place he was enormously wealthy. He had built a costly and not very small place on a street in New York where the price of a front foot would keep an ordinary family in comfort for a number of years. But beyond the mere fact of his riches there were other reasons.

He was probably sixty years old, though he never discussed his age with any one. He belonged to a few clubs and attended only one. This was in later years. Formerly he seemed fond of the society of men, but in the few years preceding his death he grew eccentric. He was likely to quarrel, and for several months before the terrible end he did quarrel with every one.

For years the firm of Tolworthy & Mead had looked after his legal needs, but the elder Mr. Tolworthy died, and old Mr. Argyle severed relations with the firm and retained an obscure attorney named James T. Hurley. He quarreled with his son almost constantly, so that the young man, who had a decided bent toward the artistic, rented a studio in Twenty-third street, where he lived a bachelor's life. He even began to find fault with the old negro cook who had been in his household for twenty years and for whose cooking he was wont to leave the club at meal times after pointedly insulting the management in his criticisms of the club cuisine.

There was one person intimately connected with Mr. Argyle, whom he treated with unflinching love and respect. She was his adopted daughter, Miss Mary Mazurek. About her the newspaper reporters could learn little, excepting that she took the place of a natural daughter in the old man's life. What her real parentage was remained a mystery. She and Bruce Argyle, the son, and the other members of the household refused absolutely to see reporters, so the reporters wrote things that they didn't see and held up the police for everything that the police had learned.

This was not much. The murder was nearly a week old, and the mystery seemed as far from solution as ever. But there was no lack of material for lively speculation.

Old Mr. Argyle had been known to quarrel with his son frequently the past few months, and this fact was given due importance. He had been out for a motor ride through the park that afternoon with Miss Mazurek and seemed unusually happy and pleased when he returned. He had telephoned to his son and invited him to the house for dinner that night.

After dinner the father and son had a long talk in the library. Miss Mazurek dined with them and said that it was a very happy party—that Mr. Argyle and his son were on an unusually friendly footing, and that the past differences seemed to have been forgotten. She denied that she knew what these differences might have been.

She left Mr. Argyle and Bruce talking in the library and went up to her room. Later she was certain she heard Bruce leave the house and after that she had neither seen nor heard a suspicious sound until the alarm rang through the house the next morning. Inspector Duffy, in view of these facts, subjected Mr. Bruce Argyle to searching examination. The young man frankly admitted that the differences of opinion between himself and his father had grown so acute that he felt it would be better for all concerned if he found quarters elsewhere. He did not harbor any ill feeling against his father on this account, he said. His father was growing old, was eccentric and extremely stubborn and set in his ways. It was simply a conflict of wills, and he had left to avoid a serious break that might have been irreparable. Miss Mazurek would bear him out in this.

Miss Mazurek Was Certain She Heard Bruce Leave the House.

"What is your financial position?" the inspector asked.

The young man smiled at the question. "I am an artist," he replied, "and so far unknown and unpaid. But my father, while he was determined to impose his will on every one about him, was not mean or vindictive. When I decided to leave the house he increased my allowance instead of cutting me off. He believed he could bring me around to his way of thinking by argument. He never tried force."

Fifteen minutes later the reporters had most of the details of this examination, and the newspapers began to print long and circumstantial stories, which pointed in but one direction—that Bruce Argyle must have had a hand in the murder of his father. It was pointed out that there was no positive proof that he had left the house at the hour he named and nothing to show that he had gone to his studio. Also, there was nothing to show that if he had left the house he had not returned at a later hour.

All of the servants had been examined, and, while they were greatly excited and distressed, they apparently knew nothing. The police had hopes that further and closer inquiries would reveal "suspicious facts on which to base an arrest." Inspector Duffy, while he would not go into details, intimated that there would be "sensational developments within a few hours."

And so it went. These stories were printed under headlines such as "Po-

"I can't wait for results!" declared Bruce.

See Know Argyle Murderer," "Son Quarreled With Argyle Before Shooting."

Artists are not usually considered men of action, and that is possibly the reason that Bruce Argyle was experiencing much difficulty in gaining recognition as an artist. He was decidedly a man of action—lean, wiry, dark eyed and ascetic. His appearance, save for the carelessness of his attire, was more that of confidential secretary to an empire builder than a dabbler in paints and canvases.

He acted with great swiftness, as he felt there was great need. Not that he was alarmed—he felt that he was in no danger of being convicted of the murder, but he was anxious to keep his name out of unpleasant association with the crime for a number of perfectly manifest reasons and one that was not manifest—he was engaged to a very charming young woman, Miss Nancy Thompson. The engagement was a secret, but he was afraid that it would leak out and Miss Thompson's name and picture would be staring at the young girl from the front pages of the newspapers.

Within a few hours after the newspapers had taken this tack he was in consultation with Mr. Hurley. Mr. Hurley was a smoothly polished professional man of about forty, who maintained a handsome office, but practiced little in the courts apparently. Young Argyle was not satisfied with the counsel of his father's lawyer. The latter advised ignoring the publicity that must inevitably attend the murder, doing all that lay within their power to aid the police and wait for results.

"I can't wait for results!" declared Bruce. "This thing is getting on my nerves and on Mary's and Nancy's. For the sake of all of us it has to be cleared up right away."

"Well, I do not see that we can hurry matters any," said Mr. Hurley in his most soothing professional manner. "No, I guess you don't," returned Bruce, a little bitterly. "I don't either. But something has to be done."

"Wait, young man, wait," Mr. Hurley advised him. "The police will surely get on the right track within another day or two."

"The police?" snorted Argyle. "They have been getting on the right track for nearly a week, and all they have done so far is make newspaper stories that are as ridiculous as they are offensive."

"The truth cannot hurt any one," mildly objected Mr. Hurley.

"Yes, it can, too!" retorted Bruce. "It is true that I was the last person with my father and that I can't prove that I wasn't there when he was killed, and you bet that hurts like the dickens!"

"It does not prove that you killed him," remarked the lawyer, "and the burden of proof rests upon the state."

"Yes," broke in Bruce, with rising scorn. "I like the idea of going on for weeks this way in the position of the police not being able to prove that I killed my father! I want them to prove who did it—not me to prove that I didn't or anything else!"

"Well, I suppose they are trying as hard as they can," said Mr. Hurley. "They seem to be busy enough."

"Oh, yes, they're busy!" Argyle laughed grimly. "Every time they have a spare man around headquarters they send him up to bother me or Mary and get us to tell everything all over again. Mary is nearly distracted. I suppose they'll be charging her with the murder in the newspapers pretty soon, and then I'll commit a murder that won't be any mystery!"

"Now, Bruce, don't excite yourself," counseled the lawyer. But he seemed uncomfortable at the mention of Miss Mazurek. "The truth may be unpleasant, as you say, but it can never do any harm."

Argyle made an impatient gesture. "It can do some real harm to Mary if she breaks down under all this—this 'unpleasantness,' as you call it," he retorted. "I suppose this thing of the will is bound to be made public, and then there will be all sorts of new and nastier stories about the whole lot of us."

"It can hardly be avoided," conceded the lawyer regretfully. "I think, myself, that the newspapers are allowed too much license in this respect, but that is better than a crippled and hampered press."

Argyle frowned at the floor and the lawyer played with a pen and waited. At last the young man looked up apparently calmed by a private resolve.

"Well," he said, with a grim undercurrent of threat in his voice, "I'll give the police—you have so much faith in them—a day longer, and then I'll take charge myself."

The lawyer threw him a swift, keen glance. "What are you planning to do?" he asked.

"Never mind!" The young man's lips came together. "You and your friends, the police, have had nearly a week at this and haven't got anywhere excepting to make a lot of trouble for people who have trouble enough as it is. I am going to get action!"

"You had better do nothing without consulting me," advised Mr. Hurley earnestly.

"I have consulted you," retorted Argyle. "All you can advise me to do is wait and trust to the police. I have done both for a week. If they haven't got something by tomorrow morning I'll—"

He cut himself off and Mr. Hurley eagerly demanded, "What will you do?"

"Well, you'll see. There isn't any particular reason why I shouldn't tell you, and I will as soon as I decide, but when I do the investigation is going to be carried on under my directions."

And with a nod to the lawyer he walked out.

On the way home he bought the final edition of an evening paper. His eye ran over the headline and he gasped and swore. It read:

Argyle Murder Motive Found! Aged Millionaire Planned Change of Will! Adopted Daughter Now Sole Heir! Son Disinherited!

There followed a detailed story of his reconciliation with his father—of his father's plan to put him back in his will as joint heir with his adopted sister and of the fact that the murder left him penniless and his adopted sister one of the richest heiresses in the world.

"Find the person whom the crime most benefits," said old Papa Tabaret, the greatest detective in fiction. Papa Tabaret was great because he was human and made mistakes. He nearly made a terrible mistake in following this axiom relentlessly, though he proved in the end that it worked out unflinching. The weakness of it is the difficulty of ascertaining the number of persons who are benefited by the crime and the precise degree of gain to each. Thus it happens that a number of persons may be benefited in different ways by a murder. These persons may not know of the existence of each other, and the one who commits the crime may be deriving great benefit, but may also at the same time be benefiting others in a lesser and even greater degree. So here is another weakness of the axiom—that the one most benefited need not necessarily have guilty knowledge of the crime.

But in this case that weakness could be eliminated, as the newspapers subtly pointed out. Miss Mazurek knew the innermost secrets of the old man's mind. She knew of his quarrels with his son. She probably knew that the will had been made entirely in her favor. She was present at the reconciliation dinner, when it must have been known to all—as the lawyer had known for several days—that Mr. Argyle purposed writing a new will and leaving the larger share of his fortune to his natural child. This was to have been done within a few days at the outside, and he was murdered the same night.

So it was that in vague terms and indirect fashion, but none the less effectively, the newspapers pointed the gaunt finger of suspicion at Miss Mazurek. She had the most to gain by the millionaire's death—that was obvious—hence, argued the reporters, she doubtless could tell more if she wished. Perhaps, indeed, she actually possessed the solution of the mystery.

INFANT DEATHS ARE AVOIDABLE

In Most of the Cases This Is Declared True.

SLAUGHTER OF INNOCENTS

As Deaths From Preventable Diseases Are Unnecessary, They Must Be Charged Against Human Ignorance or to Human Neglect, and a Responsibility of the First Magnitude Is Involved in This Problem.

Indianapolis, May 15.—C. M. Hilliard of the sanitary science department of Purdue university, at the conference of state health officers held here, declared that most of the ninety-odd thousand infant deaths in the United States in one year were avoidable.

"This is a public health problem and a responsibility of the first magnitude to be taken up," he said. Prof. Hilliard spoke on "Infant Mortality and the Public Health," saying that as deaths from preventable diseases are unnecessary, they must be charged against human ignorance or to human neglect. "Clean milk for babies is obtainable," said Prof. Hilliard. "Mothers should be educated to realize the importance of breast feeding."

Pure water, he said, can also be obtained wherever a community will bestir itself to appropriate money for purification plants, hence there is no need for deaths from preventable diseases. Governor Ralston, who was to have addressed the health officers, was unable to be present. He sent his congratulations to the association for the work it is doing, in a letter in which he said:

"For generations the great body of the people paid little attention to health preservation or disease prevention. They gave thought to their horses, cattle, hogs, chickens, but had little knowledge of themselves—the construction of the human body or the relations and functions of its various parts. With a faith as childlike as it was fatuous they turned the vital matter of personal health and its conservation over to 'the doctor,' placing upon him an unwarranted responsibility, expecting from him unwarranted results. To this public ignorance and indifference to the laws of physical health much of the quackery and bigotry of the medical profession is chargeable; for these are but the children of credulity."

MUST CHANGE HER FAITH

American Woman's Conversion Required to Her Marrying Prince.

Florence, May 15.—Prince Arsene Kara-Georgevitch, the brother of the king of Serbia, who is to marry Mrs. Hugo Pratt, a New York woman, has failed to persuade the mayor of Florence to dispense with the necessary formalities in regard to Mrs. Pratt. He was equally unsuccessful in his efforts to obtain action from the American and Russian consuls, who insisted that he abide by the law of the land.

For that reason Prince Arsene has decided upon an exclusively religious marriage and has arranged for a private ceremony at the Russian church. His bride, however, must become orthodox, or else the marriage would be invalid. Until the latter matter is settled no date for the marriage can be fixed.

NEBRASKA CYCLONE CUTS WIDE SWATH

Eight Victims Reported at Seward.

Lincoln, Neb., May 15.—Lancaster, York, Seward and Saunders counties were visited by a tornado and definite reports place the dead at eight with the list of injured mounting toward half a hundred. The city of Seward appears to have been the hardest hit. Twenty houses there were completely destroyed. The eight people were killed there. Their houses were destroyed and the victims caught in the wreckage. A fourth of the town was wrecked. The list of dead follows: Mrs. Chris Wesserman, Mrs. David Hoover, William Hassinger, Sam Crimm, John Schultz and his seven-year-old daughter, Mrs. David Imlay and Mrs. Edmunds.

The tornado started in York county and spent its greatest force in its journey northeast, until it disappeared in the air eighteen miles north of Lincoln. McCool Junction appears to have been the only town struck aside from Seward. Four persons were seriously injured there. The storm passed through a thickly settled farming section, and it is believed later reports will increase the number of fatalities.

A monoplane collided at the Johannisthal flying grounds with a biplane, and the two aviators were killed.

FIRST PRACTICE IS HELD

Sunday School League Promises to be a Big Success.

Judging from the slugging the ball was given in the practice game at the South Main street ball park last night, the Sunday school league games may uncover some regular ball players. The large crowd that turned out for practice last night indicates the interest that is already shown in the new league, and its success seems very probable. Two teams lined up last night and played five innings. One side won, of course, but no one now attempts to guess which one it was because they soon quit counting the runs. The first game in the league will be played between the Presbyterians and Christians Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Pythian Sisters Exemplify Work at District Meeting.

Rushville was well represented at the district meeting of the Pythian Sisters which closed at Knightstown last night. A morning and afternoon session was held yesterday. The Rushville degree team did the work, which elicited praise from every side. The work was pronounced as good as ever seen on the floor of the grand lodge of Indiana.

VERN WINK'S STOCK IS SEIZED

Action is Taken to Satisfy Judgment
His Wife Received Following
Granting of Divorce.

Sheriff K. K. Kirk yesterday made a tour of inspection of the railroad camps in the vicinity of Lewisville with a view of getting information concerning blind tigers said to be operated there by Italian workmen, says the Newcastle Star. The sheriff saw much and is in a position to make raids when necessary.

Much complaint has been received because of liquor sales in the railroad camps. The authorities have not been disposed to interfere with the foreigners in their own drinking but have about decided to clean out the entire bunch because of sales made to men and boys who reside in the towns and country in the vicinity.

The recent raids on the Italian tigers at Knightstown had a good effect and several of the offenders at Lewisville and other points have left the country. However, at Lewisville one joint is said to be in operation and will soon be due for a thorough cleaning.

Sheriff Kirk yesterday completed the task of foreclosing on the drug store of Vern Wink at Knightstown. A judgment held by Wink's divorced wife caused the action of the sheriff. The store has been closed and further dangers of liquor sales from that notorious joint are over.

The sheriff today expected to destroy the liquor seized in the raid on Wink's place and the Italian camp. The four barrels of whiskey and wine secured from Wink and the four barrels of bottled beer formerly owned by the Italians will be emptied into the jail sewer.

PROMISES TO BE BIG CONVENTION

State Sunday School Workers
at Evansville in June.

EXPERTS ON THE PROGRAM

The Indiana Sunday school convention which will be held in Evansville June 17, 18 and 19, will mark the close of the forty-ninth year of the State Sunday school association. The year has been full of phenomenal progress in the departments of activity. The personnel of the convention body will consist of representative pastors, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and other consecrated workers. This promises to be one of the largest state conventions Indiana has ever held.

The program will include some specialists who have been in the state before and have become known as experts in Sunday school work, and also a number who come to Indiana's convention for the first time.

Further information may be had by writing the Indiana Sunday school association, 417 Law Bldg., Indianapolis.

Ralph Senour, a former Clarksburg resident, has been selected to fill the place of clerk on the Shelbyville school board which was organized last night. Between the times of attending to the duties of his office Ralph will devote himself to the study of manual training which he expects to teach later.
